सामान्य अनुदेश

इस प्रश्न-सह-उत्तर (क्यू.सी.ए.) पुस्तिका में 32+2 पृष्ठ हैं। प्रश्न-पत्र, क्यू.सी.ए. पुस्तिका के अंत में संलग्न है, जो अलग (वियोज्य) किया जा सकता है और उम्मीदवार परीक्षा के उपरांत अपने साथ ले जा सकते हैं।

रफ कार्य के लिए तीन खाली पृष्ठ (पृष्ठ संख्या. 30-32) दिए गए हैं।

पुस्तिका प्राप्त होने पर, कृपया यह जांच कर लें कि इस क्यू.सी.ए. पुस्तिका में कोई कमी न हो, फटा हुआ पृष्ठ न हो अथवा कोई पृष्ठ गायब न हो इत्यादि। यदि ऐसा हो, तो इसके बदले नई क्यू.सी.ए. पुस्तिका प्राप्त कर लें।

General Instructions

This Question-cum-Answer (QCA) Booklet contains 33+2 pages. Question Paper in detachable form is available at the end of the QCA Booklet which can be taken away by the candidate after examination.

Three blank pages (Page Nos. 30-32) have been provided for rough work.

On receipt of the Booklet, please check that this QCA Booklet does not have any shortcomings, torn or missing pages etc. If so, get it replaced with a fresh QCA Booklet.

3. Just when the caterpillar thought the world was over, it became a butterfly

The old adage goes, "It is most silent before the storm". Perhaps this plays out in the lifecycle of a humble larvae as it transforms into a magnificent butterfly. And if the 'butterfly effect' is to be accepted as a scientific theory, then a single flutter of its wings wreaks havoc on the antipodal end of the Earth.

The allegory of metamorphosis is made out in this transformative change, suggesting that the entombed cocoon, whilst shrouded in darkness, will one day take to the skies. It is suggestive of gruelling circumstances creating the sturdiest characters who endure against all odds and are rewarded for it.

It is the intent of this article to peruse the idea of transformative growth, stemming from modest beginnings, while dwelling on several facets of change. The principles underlying such potential are laid bare and subject to the scrutiny of consistency.

The diamond in the rough

The raw carbonic form from which the diamond is extracted informs us of the rough exteriors that hide gems inside them. It is analogous to the potential that rests within all things that might hold immense value. The French Zoologist (ref) Lamarck refers to such innate ability to trigger

Change as 'elan vital'. A non-limbic entity such as the caterpillar in its larval stage, sprouts ~~the~~wings in its butterfly form. While Lamarckism is disproven on most counts, perhaps the idea of a 'potential' is intrinsic to all life forms, whose expression may, one day, lead to revolutionary transformation.

But if this is an evolutionary facet, and the urge for change lies within at all times but in a dormant state, the question begs asking why does the butterfly necessarily have to endure these phases while birthing a butterfly directly could easily save it, time and precious biological energy.

Whilst this question perplexes biologists to the day, the religious teachings provide some answers. The Vedic analogue to such transformation finds resonance in the varnashrama systems. Man is made to traverse the phases from Brahmacharya and Grihaasta before he is allowed moksha after completing Vanaprastha. Vedic literature which propounds existence as gruelling teaches that the successful completion of these phases, through the gruelling existence of mundanity, will be rewarded with the liberation of the soul. The human gains wings after years in the body which serves as his cocoon.

Time the mother of all invention

History is replete with instances of such changed growth, close on the heels of assumed devastation. The pangea hypothesis of planetary life transformation is informative.

Earth cooked like an oven, with chemical molecules aimlessly existing till the first blue green algae breathed oxygen, leading to the explosion of life, as we see it. Thus vibrance in life came out of darkness and desolation.

Johann Salk, a scientist credited with discovery of Insulin is all too familiar with such desolation. Medical histriography records him entering a ward of sick diabetes riddled children (those on the verge of death, to leave the ward with smiling faces that would outlive, what was until then a fatal illness.

A similar parable plays out in the transformation of China. Hu Jintao is said to have uttered these immortal words "Hide your strengths, Bide your time". And the result is self evident. A poor nation of rice farmers in the 1950's is an industrial behemoth challenging for world domination today.

To all those suffering under the yoke of British tyranny, perhaps never believed freedom would one day arrive. The French Revolution too, shook the edifice politically as it ushered in change accompanied by thoughts of liberty and fraternity. The french much like Indians suffered the gruelling long night of despotism till the Sun tore through the darkness with a warm day.

Stepping stones and failures

K. Sivan was grief stricken upon the failure of the lander and rover of Chandrayaan 2. His condition was perhaps a recreation of APJ Kalam's tryst with failed rocket launchers. Yet, for all the gloom that surrounded those days, life finds itself rebirthed in ecstasies, sooner than later.

The beaming ISRO director Mr

Somnath , thanks his predecessors as he oversees the success of Chandrayaan 3. The West as a hypocritical collective laughed and mocked India's space ambitions , and we may imagine many patriots sorrowful for their failures. The world was not over , and today India dreams of giving men and women flight capabilities through its Gaganyaan mission.

The forefathers of mankind, whom we know of through the relic form such as Propliopithecoids were tree dwellers. From seeking cover in the safe confines of a tree , cowering from mammal beasts of prey, man has come a long way as the apex species . This is a tale of transformative growth, just that the time scale is of millennia .

Our ancestors crawled so that mankind could one day , like the butterfly, fly. Albeit on contraptions of steel, defying gravity or mother nature herself.

A further query into the transformative changes in society evinces similar shifts in paradigm. For a society taxed by the Varma system, playing out as the exploitative caste, it is a gargantuan shift to find discrimination being less imprinted in society.

Casteism, untouchability persisted by for millenia, accepted unwillingly by the laity, all for one single stroke of Constitution's pen to undo it. For the dalit brethren among us, it was perhaps inconceivable to think of equality. But today, India has had premiers from the dalit community (K. Narayanan) and her excellency Smt. Droupadi Murmu. Where they were once denied water from a tumbler, they commanded the Indian airforce as Supreme Commanders in less than a generation.

Kalam's exhortation to take India towards greatness ~~left~~ on wings of fire finds resonance in today's youth. Neeraj Chopra, the posterboy of Indian youth and the heights to which one can ascend is an example of such change.

Prior to his gold medal, India did not have a track medallist on the podium. Having suffered many an embarrassments for not producing gold medallists, as the most populous nation, his victory broke the camel's back and potentially invigorates many others to dream of achieving what was thought to be impossible.

Just as acclaimed warriors on battlefields cannot have spotless armors, it may be contested it is impossible to achieve greatness without enduring the rigors of failures making it seem like a lost cause until the day victory arrives.

And such metamorphosis takes persistence, courage and willingness to endure the toil. The gardens of roses in the vaunted fields of peace, were perhaps wastelands till they were sown with seeds of irresoluteness.

The bamboo tree is nature's answer to the capacity for eye-catching change. The first two years of its life, there is no evidence of its growth. And much like miracles of Providence's making, they shoot up over a few months to commanding heights. The caterpillar becomes a butterfly that takes flight to discover the world. But must all caterpillars necessarily take flight?

A shattered Cocoon

The fatalistic school of thought finds takers among those who believe the ends are certain. Every cocoon is a future butterfly. But a nanced understanding of the subject, might have us disagree

The caterpillar might nourish ideas of flight whilst entombed in its cocoon, & all for it to never see the light of day again. The cocoon might serve as nourishment for another lifeform or perhaps be stamped out of existence altogether by a higher life form ignorant of its existence.

Not all periods of intense strife lead to success. For every R. Praggnanandha, an overnight success to many, there are millions of chessplayers whose dreams did not come to pass. For every Rakesh Sharma who returned safely to earth after becoming a cosmonaut, there is a Kalpana Chawla who did not.

The dreaminess of existence ~~is~~ weighs heavy on the heart but if it weren't for this ability to dream

big, to aspire for greatness , mankind's progress would have long since stalled

It is the nature of human enterprise to dream , and fight for the day. we may spread wings. All darkness is dispelled from light as manifested in the saying 'Asatma Sadgameya Tumosome Tyotirgomeya'. As exhorted by Alfred Tennyson, though we may be made weak by time and fate, we are not to yield.

6. The world is a tragedy to those who feel, but a comedy to those who think

A cartoon features in the NY Times in September of 2014, supposedly commemorating India's Mars Mission success. Pictured is an Indian farmer, clad in a dhoti, with a cow in tow knocking on the doors of a room that announces itself to be an "Elite Space Club".

The racist connotations of this editorial output was decried by many across the world. They felt it a tragedy of some proportion to decide the nascent success of an ambitious civilisational state towards space supremacy.

The ones offended by this supposed literary product masquerading as literary and creative liberty, were emotionally fuelled into producing this response.

While the genial scientists at ISRO, no doubt ^{cranially} gifted perhaps laughed at the suggestiveness of the cartoon. The thinking men, one may imagine, laughed at the thought of how the NY Times would have to bury its head in shame with every successfull mission of India's space programme in the future.

It is the intent of this write up to explore themes of tragedy being vested in emotion and comedy in thinking, while holding these premises aloft to the diligent scrutiny of time, person and place.

The tragedy in the comedy

Dante Alighieri, writes the Divine ~~Comedy~~ Comedy in the medieval era pre Renaissance. One may be forgiven for thinking the book is a riot of laughter for the title is greatly misleading. It is instead a journey to the depths of 'Hell' and no smile may be drawn while reading this literary masterpiece.

Inherent to all existence is an ability to interpret events as one sees fit. An event of tragic proportions may don the garb of comedy with every retelling. The ~~verstal~~ versatile actor Robin Williams, who was the epitome of happiness harbored deep sadness that eventually led him to take his life. A sizable minority of the 'stand up' comedians are individuals who hide darkness in their humour present it in an embellished form for our entertainment.

The ruins of Pompeii buried under the volcanic explosion of Mt. Vesuvius has fossilised individuals captured in certain acts. One in particular is pictured in a motion that wouldn't please the theologians. The tragedy of his passing and the comedy of his motioning towards us, is at once a reality that may be interpreted as per the mindset of the onlooker.

Whilst it's a tragedy and a comedy and neither is wrong for this line of thoughts the mind's significance in interpretation must be given renewed focus as we ask what allows one to see the light heartedness in every miserable situation.

The great theatrican of the 'silent era' in filmography, Charlie Chaplin's take on life is informative. A significant number of his acts involved him falling over, being wounded all for it

c evoke happy feelings among his admirers. In his misery did the audience find joy? The sadistic element may not be the raison d'être, instead it may be the understanding that emotionally overwhelming oneself may close off the grey matter from interpreting it for what it actually is.

Chaplin's 'the Dictator' modelled on the tragic tale of Germany's Hitler is a case in point. Whilst the very name caused an outpouring of grief, surely in its theatrical form, it caused a laughter riot. Is it then, that the perception of tragedy/comedy can only be seen through the light of circumstance and place, and not emotions altogether?

If one is puzzled by the likes of the Chaplins, we may wonder what fuels such perceptivity in them to present events to either induce comedy/tragedy as they deem necessary.

The stoic school of thought of ancient Rome, with Emperor Marcus Aurelius, the greatest proponent may have a reason for such thinking. A similar metaphysical discourse of epistemology is advanced by the Taoism school of ancient China. The Japanese too have given it a name in the form of 'Wabi Sabi'.

It's a theoretical exposition that urges one to see existence exactly as it is. A passing thought, an ephemeral moment in time. And therein allow the acceptance of all life just as it is. These philosophies have perhaps informed enlightenment to ease between seeing the aspects of life through a non emotional lens, lending one to laugh along and celebrate it.

The Bhagavad Gita's equivalent of the Stithikapragya enunciates similar values for impassionate reasoning. The modern component of Weberian discourse too, suggests a detached working, for where the emotions overwhelm a civil servant may not perform optimally.

The Gandhian quip to a reporter who asked him what he thinks of Democracy in Britain responds by saying he thinks it is a good idea. Winston Churchill's favorite Naked Fakir, was not prompted to feel sad over an obvious jibe regarding India's lack of democracy and Britain's supposed possession of it. But an aware Gandhi, with all his mental faculties to his aid, embarrasses the reporter instead.

The Archimedes tale of Eureka plays out as a comedy in tragic circumstances. The folklore suggests that an Archimedes who was threatened to be put to death if he could not find the weight of the King's Crown without a scale, ran naked along the streets of Greece having birthed the eponymous Archimedes Principle. Archimedes was thinking and not emotionally compromised.

which would otherwise have him find sympathy for his woful state instead.

Where the dichotomy holds no water

On occasion, the sheer weight of the situation does not allow characterising it as humorous. Surely, no respecting man can find humour in the tragedy of the Nirbhaya case or the monstrosity of the Disha rap case in Andhra Pradesh.

Still fewer would dare smirk at the tragic loss of lives in Balasore train derailment of Odisha. If heart-wrenching tales such as these evoke humor, humanity may have lost its way.

The tragedy of war victims and soldiers deaths too evokes pain. But perhaps the enemy who felled them, finds joy while the country which mourns sees it as a tragedy. The Jain philosophy of 'Anekantavada' allows a relook at every event through many lenses and dimensions. If every freedom fighter is another man's terrorist, does it not hold that these events may never be seen through monochromatic lens of black and white, instead ~~must~~ be seen as grey.

The tragedy and the comedy, is neither in the thinking or the feeling, but it is firmly in the hands of the audience exposed to it.

Whilst it may be argued that the emotional intelligence that accompanies feeling invoking empathy and compassion allows for concerted action in any event of misery, surely it may not be considered superior to the singular application of rationale alone. It may be required to run over one pedestrian while swerving an out of control vehicle, to save many others. Would an emotionally overwhelmed heart be capable of rational thinking.

The Shakespearian works of As You like It or Merchant of Venice toys with themes of tragedy and comedy in the context of mindfulness. The instance of saving a life from the degenerate Shylock, insisting on a pound of flesh but without any bloodshed is a case in point.

Rudyard Kipling in "If", also exhorts one to keep his mind about him when all else around them are losing theirs. Is this not an appeal for mind over matter?

DIALECTICAL NOT DICHOTOMOUS

The worlds of tragedy and comedy, of heart and mind are not poles apart in a spectrum. Instead they are finely overlapped. David Goleman's reference to E.Q also speaks of the fine intertwining of the heart and mind, and not the triumph of one over the other.

The 2nd ARC refers to holistic competence in a civil servant who espouses both virtues in equal measure, reflecting his ability to charter unknown adventures. Much of life is a careful marrying of the two principles of emotion and rationale.

The drowning of the Titan submersive evoked worldwide sorrow. But there are those that found humor in a bunch of billionaires daredevilry in attempting a stunt in unsafe conditions. They now occupy a watery grave in Poseidon's seabed but in their case one of either tragedy or comedy or perhaps in between?
